Mindfully-selected organic ingredients for a cleaner and sustainable boost of energy.

From the desk of DAVID STELZER

Dear Friends and Valued Customers,

July is an exciting time as we watch our crops grow by leaps and bounds. Here in Dufur, we had a beautiful spring, and the first fruits of the season are rolling in! We are savoring the strawberries and anxious to begin tasting the cherries. It does my heart good to see – and taste – the bounty of the land manifesting again.

But here at Azure, as most of you know, we faced quite a blow with losing our headquarters to a disastrous fire. In addition to our main offices, our liquid repackaging operation, carob factory, and fruit packing line were all destroyed. The total loss of these three areas has directly impacted our customers. We lost all our liquids, such as oil, honey, syrup, and our packaging and labeling equipment. Our team custom-built the carob equipment, so all carob is out of stock until we can fabricate new machinery. And our fruit packing system, too, was customized for our needs. We have had to do a lot of rapid innovation to keep operating, and we have been stretched to our absolute limit trying to get everything up and running.

I wanted to update you on our progress, so you know what to expect and when. Fortunately, we quickly located another building for our liquid repackaging and carob production. Within a month, we repurposed this building to meet food safety standards, and it has been inspected and certified for kosher and organics.The next step was to get all our liquids poured, packaged, and labeled for sale. Before the fire, we had efficient equipment that made this a quick task.But since the fire, we have had to rely on pouring by hand as we wait for our supplier to build replacement equipment.

Azure Standard Headquarters burned to the ground in April.

This turnaround time was a couple of weeks longer than we hoped because so many products were affected. In the meantime, we had trouble tweaking our software to show what was out of stock because our system 'knew' we had the bulk product; however, it was not yet poured or packaged for sale. We apologize for the confusion and inconvenience this may have caused you as you tried to place orders. By the time we go to press with this letter, all our liquids should be available for purchase again.

Regarding our carob line, most of our equipment was custom made. We are working on getting all the molds, cooling tunnels, and packaging ready to resume our carob processing. We expect to have our carob-covered nuts and carob chips out by mid to late July, but it will take us longer to get the carob cups, truffles, and bars ready for you. We will probably consolidate our carob into two brands instead of three: Missy J's and Azure Market carob will return, while Uncommon Carob will most likely be discontinued.

As for our fruit processing, it has been difficult to source new equipment and find space, but we will do whatever it takes to get fresh fruit to our customers! We don't have a firm plan in place, but we trust that it will all work out in time for fruit harvesting. As you might imagine, making these changes during what was already a busy time has been a challenge!

As we recover, I am beyond grateful there were no injuries in the fire. As for what caused it or why it occurred, the fire marshal declared her theory. Many of you have expressed your own concerns and thoughts, and we, too, wish we had more answers. We may never know with certainty why the fire happened or what caused it, but we know how to move forward. We also know we must not dwell too long on the loss.

I want to thank the Azure customer family for standing by us through thick and thin. We have received hundreds of letters, emails, and phone calls from you! Your encouragement, loyalty, and outpouring of love and concern have been a great comfort to us. You have also responded by supporting us with increased sales, and we are grateful. I want you to know we are doing our absolute best to keep moving forward to provide for you. We hope to be running on all cylinders very soon. We are determined to overcome this setback and build back stronger than before.

In closing, we choose to look for the best in all circumstances. I have learned that we never know what the future holds, but we know that the way we frame the future is up to us. We can always choose to react in a forward-thinking and positive manner. If there's a lesson we have learned, it is that it does no good to dwell on loss but to be thankful for what is not lost and move forward the best we possibly can. We are grateful for you, each other, and the opportunity to continue living abundantly!

YOUR SUMMERTIME FAVORITES ARE BACK!

Can you imagine a July without berries? In just about every picnic or family gathering, every barbecue or holiday festivity, berries grace the dessert table. Strawberries and blueberries make up the red-whiteand-blue theme of Independence Day desserts, and fruit salads are at their finest with fresh berries interspersed among the more common fruits. Yes, some of the sweetest summer memories are made surrounding berries.

Most everyone loves them – take a look at any kind of berry, and you can't help but delight in the whimsical design. Their bulbous shapes look like they are just waiting to explode in sweet juiciness as you pop them into your mouth. And have you taken notice of the berry's beautiful sheen? Each is a bit different – notice the glossy glaze of blackberries while the red raspberry appears frosted. A stack of strawberries is dressed in a cheery, almost glowing shade of red, while the blueberry appears dusky and clouded, with swirling shades of blues. Toss them all together against a backdrop of fresh whipped cream, and, well, there are few things more appealing than that on a table.

They are equally splendid as they grow in the garden. Again, each is different. But whether growing on canes, bushes, or small stems low to the ground, I can't get enough of watching jewel-toned berries against green leaves; it looks like the vegetation is dripping with gemstones. To many of us, berries are nature's edible gems because they are beautiful and delicious and packed with health benefits. Their short season and their fragility make them even more treasured. For sure, the berry patch is a prized part of the gardener's experience. If you have not yet ventured into this endeavor, it is well worth the effort, and you can - and should - begin now.

Making your berry patch is slightly different from your typical vegetable garden because the plants that make berries continue to produce year after year. You'll want to establish these perennial plants in an undisturbed area so they can mature. With a bit of tending, you will reap a greater yield of ripe, plump, and tasty berries with each passing season. Below you will find some helpful tips for growing some of the most common kinds, along with a few recipes for making good use of baskets full of berries!

Blueberries

Some of my earliest memories are of planting blueberries with my dad. He plowed a strip of garden space along our suburban driveway and lined it with strawberry and blueberry plants. I still remember the excitement and anticipation I felt, the wonder that the small leafy wild things I held in my hands and helped him nestle into the soil would somehow produce the sweet, juicy berries he promised. As always, his word was good, and I recall running around in the summery evening twilight barefoot with a bowl in hand, plucking those berries off and taking them to my mom. The next day, which was my birthday, she baked them into blueberry pies, where they oozed into a warm, inky blue filling for her flaky pie crust. She topped the warm pie with melting vanilla ice cream...a midsummer dream for sure!

Blueberries are ideally planted in springtime, but if you didn't do it then, you can do it now. It will take a few years for them to produce well, so get started soon, and you won't be wishing next year that you had already begun! You'll want to carefully consider their placement because these perennial bushes will be sticking around for decades, and you want to ensure they can give you their best. Around my area, they grow well on gentle slopes. Your berry patch will require a significant amount of dedicated space. Plant your bushes about six feet apart to allow them to grow and access enough nutrients.

A good location for blueberries ensures plenty of light and water. They can grow in partly-shady spots but will produce more berries under more light, so opt for a sunny spot if you have it. The same holds for pH – blueberries will grow in more alkaline soil, but they prefer a rich, acidic, and well-drained soil. Aiming for a pH of 4-5 will reward you with a higher yield. If you are new to gardening, you might be thinking to yourself: How do I know what my soil pH is? And how do I make it more acidic? Is this going to be complicated?

Fresh berries are a treat loved by kids and adults alike.

Nope! It is easy. You can use a simple pH kit from a garden center to test your soil. You can achieve the rich and acidic soil in one step by mixing in several inches worth of sawdust or peat. When you get ready to plant, add peat moss to the hole, and then top it with 3" mulch or pine needles.

When you plant them, be sure to water them heavily. Then fertilize each year – I like to remember to fertilize on the first official summer day in June. You can easily amend your soil with aged compost that is high in organic matter, but you don't want high nitrogen or manure for blueberries.

Keep the sawdust layer thick around each bush, and don't forget to prune them to encourage thicker and stronger branches, removing about one-fifth of the older, declining wood each year. You would be wise to plant several varieties to extend your harvest throughout summer. Choose some of each: early, midseason, and late-season varieties. That way, you can extend your season of fresh blueberry plucking for a month longer.

For those of you who have little space or like to roam and keep your garden portable, some varieties have been bred to thrive in pots. When growing berries in containers, be sure to use an acidic soil mix. When the weather gets good and hot, make sure that your berries get a good thorough drink at least several times a week to grow juicy and plump.

Strawberries

As my young daughter and I strolled through our local nursery on a chilly spring morning, she made a beeline to the strawberry plants. I had in mind an herb garden, but she was captivated by strawberries from the start, and when she caught sight of the beginnings of a few tiny green berries tucked under those characteristic three-lobed leaves, there was no turning back. She came home proudly carrying a couple of strawberry starts. She could hardly contain her joy at these small plants and their promise – the promise of her own berries! She was too excited to wait for me. She dug a little patch, put them in herself, and little patch, put them in herself, and watered them with great care and devotion. I followed up by adding strawberry starts from Ellie's Eden so we could expand our patch.

If you came home with starts from the garden center, or you bought Ellie's Garden Starts from us, you are well on your way to fresh strawberries. If you are more ambitious, you can also increase your patch by purchasing strawberry rhizomes in tangled, brown, deadlooking clusters of 25 or 50. While these might look hopeless, they are actually full of life! Strawberries propagate by rhizomes, or horizontal roots, and this is what you get when you order them by mail. I admit I am not that ambitious, and I am more than happy to stock my patch with Azure's starts, but I wanted you to know your options! Plus, it is just so cool to learn about rhizomes, right?

Strawberries come in many varieties, with each yielding a harvest at different times, so again, you can spread your joy over a longer season if you include multiple varieties in your patch. Some are suited to different parts of the country, while others are more or less resistant to various diseases, so trying a few different types makes sense. Plant your strawberries according to Grandma's wisdom, when the fruit trees begin to leaf out. Strawberries grow well in compost-enriched soil with a pH of around 6.5. The rhizomes, also called runners, will develop and produce "daughter" plants, which is a good thing because even though they are perennials, the mother plant will not produce well after several years. However, you still want your strawberry patch to remain from year to year, with a few modifications. For strawberries to reward you with a prolific patch over many years, you allow the "daughters" to grow, and you'll want to remove the older "mothers" on a rotation. If you plant in a square pattern and guide which daughter you will nurture, it is easy to keep track of the generations and which should be replaced each year. You can find various suggested methods in different gardening resources, but it is good to plan for this before your child begins her own plantings! For us this year, well, it will be a little more haphazard, and that's okay because they are already producing berries! That is the great thing about plants. They just keep doing what they do and wait for us to learn. Now that I think of it, they are a lot like kids.

PROVEN FORMULAS FOR WELLNESS

Bubbie's premium quality products* have legions of loyal customers and an army of social media devotees thanks to meticulous attention to the details, and our unique, authentic and delicious flavors.

For the gardener, there are very few things more rewarding than eating berries freshly picked from the garden.

Strawberries are as irresistible to wildlife as they are to my daughter, so you will need to have a system in place to protect them. Again, there are many different strategies, but the basic idea is to cover them in a way that prevents animals from munching on them. Nylon netting is simple and effective.

When they are bright red and fully ripe, you have reached the glorious time for harvesting – don't pick them before they have reached peak! You also want to pinch them off the stem behind the leaves – don't pull the berry.

There are so many luscious ways to eat strawberries, but my favorites are simple: strawberry pie, strawberry shortcake, and strawberry balsamic salad. Check out our recipe for Strawberry Balsamic Salad Dressing at the end of this article.

Cane Berries

Some of the most delicate and fragile things in life can be the most delightful – and that is how I would describe cane berries, including blackberries, raspberries, and hybrids such as marionberries, boysenberries, etc. When these berries of the Rubus genus ripen, there is a pressing need to slip them off their stems with urgency and eat them in haste! They do not last long - they will be eagerly swallowed up by wildlife if you tarry. They also don't store well, unless you freeze them or preserve them. But to be honest, I have never had a problem making short work of a berry harvest – in my house, they are usually gobbled up overnight or put immediately into a pie or cobbler!

In a bounty of variety, there are red, gold, and black raspberries, as well as blackberries, and people often confuse one for the other. You can tell raspberries apart from blackberries by their hollow core and tiny hairs. But all are luscious, and a wise gardener plants several varieties or cultivars – since they bear fruit at different times, you can enjoy a longer season of harvest that way. It is a good idea to choose the best-suited varieties to your particular zone and conditions. You can also find compact varieties ideal for container growing, or long cane varieties meant for wilder conditions.

There are differences in the growth habits of raspberries versus blackberries and how to tend them to yield the best crop, so it's a good idea to do a little research as your canes get growing. But in general, cane fruits' growth needs are similar to those of blueberries – they like rich, well-draining soil but with a pH a bit more level at 6. They grow best in full sun and with moist soil. They also have the same needs for sawdust mulch and fertilizing, around the start of summer, just as in blueberries. Adding compost in the fall will benefit next year's crop.

Raspberry canes grow wild and free and should be allowed to invade and take over their plot, so you'll want to give them an area to themselves. Plant the canes about two feet apart. You can dress up the area and make it easier to harvest your berry patch if you train the canes to grow along a trellis for support. But if you saw our patch, it would surely call to your mind the "bracken" tangles where the stuffed bunny and his boy played in the garden wood of "The Velveteen Rabbit." (If you haven't read this classic children's storybook, no matter your age, you should!)

Left unpruned, red raspberries are their own worst enemy as they clump and then compete for nutrients, resulting in fewer, smaller, less yummy berries. You will reap a better harvest (more fruit and larger and sweeter, too) if you do a hard, late winter thinning of your canes to allow sunlight and air to penetrate the bramble, reducing the likelihood of fungal pathogens.

How you will prune the canes depends on the type of raspberry you have planted, so I will leave that detail to you to search out elsewhere, but just know that you'll want to be purchasing some garden shears and gloves for this one!

How do you know when it is time to harvest your heavenly berries? They are ripe when they easily slide off their stem. It is best to pick early in the morning when they are cool, but be sure they are dry before picking. Wash your prized berries immediately before eating them, otherwise they will quickly rot. Enjoy them with reckless abandon – they are high in fiber, vitamin C, and antioxidants yet relatively low in sugars. Eat liberally!

Berries And Beasts

No matter where you plant them, if you aren't careful, your berries may get eaten by birds, so you'll want to have a plan to protect your berries. You can look into methods to deter animals or cover your plants to lessen the impact – netting and fencing can be an effective way to protect your plot. But, keep in mind that everyone has to eat, so the best course of action is to plant more than you need and plan to share at least a bit of the harvest with your feathered friends. Many types of birds will benefit your garden, not only by eating insects but also by delighting you with their song and acrobatic antics. However, deer and rabbits can be a real problem and can do a tremendous amount of damage in a single night of unguarded browsing, so consider your options ahead of time and prepare accordingly.

Native Edible Berries

North America is blessed with a bounty of berry variety. Though seldom found at grocery stores, you can often find local native berry varieties at farmers' markets or by foraging, and local nurseries may be able to help you source lesserknown varieties to be grown on your own land. Explore your own area's abundance, and discover the unique flavors, textures, and health benefits of each, including elderberries, huckleberries, cloudberries, buffalo berries, mulberries, Aronia berries, gooseberries, lingonberries, cranberries, salmonberries, boysenberries, and even teaberries! Most (but not all) wild berries are safe to eat. Next month we will talk more about foraging wild edibles, including a few wild berries - I can't wait to explore that topic with you!

Whichever berries you choose, they are all packed with antioxidants and nutrients that boost your health and are relatively low in sugars, making berries an ideal superfood snack or delicious dessert.

Yes, berries are the crown jewels of summer, bursting with flavor. And when you grow them at home, you get piles of them fresh at your fingertips, plucked at the peak of perfection, to help savor the hottest days of summer while nourishing your body with their powerful healing properties. If you are just getting started on your berry patch or need to supplement your own harvest with more to store, we have you covered with fresh-picked and flash-frozen berries, dried berries, berry powders, jams and preserves, and more.

This summer try our: Dried Golden Berries (DF380), Frozen Blackberries (FG010), Frozen Raspberries (FG1009), Frozen Strawberries (FG1007), and Frozen Blueberries (FG090)

Available in  $5 \times 8$  oz,  $3 \times 5 \times 8$  oz, and  $8 \times 5 \times 8$  oz

I have the best intentions for making smoothies each day, but sometimes I don't have the time to prep fresh fruit. Other times, when I just throw random things in, my smoothies don't taste so great. We were blown away by how delicious and creamy this smoothie is, and it is a great way to encourage kids to eat greens! Scenic Fruit's blend is convenient, too. Take these ready-to-go frozen portions straight to the blender for an antioxidant, vitamin-rich smoothie. No ice is required, just mix equal parts of this frozen mix and your choice of liquid, then blend. No sugars, syrups, or preservatives are included so you get just the fresh taste of sun-ripened fruit with no fillers.

A note about Scenic Fruit:

Nestled in the shadows of Mt. Hood, Scenic Fruit Company was founded as a seasonal cannery in 1931. Over 85 years later, they are the oldest berry processor in the Northwest and a year-round, full-service fruit company.

A note about Pamela's:

Pamela started her company in 1988 with the mission that everyone, regardless of dietary restrictions, should have food delicious enough to celebrate. She continues to be involved in every aspect of the company. Pamela takes great pride in the auglity of the products she has provided to her consumers for 30 years.

PAMELA'S BISCUIT & SCONE MIX, GLUTEN-FREE Available in 13 oz, 3 x 13 oz, and 6 x 13 oz

Pamela's is known for providing some of the most amazing baking mixes! We are adding this gluten-free biscuit & scone mix because it makes the best, most tender and moist scones we have ever eaten! It is also so easy to use, just add two simple ingredients and you have biscuits or scones for breakfast, lunch, or dinner. Top with gravy, herb butter, honey, fruit preserves, or nothing at all. You will be surprised that a GF biscuit can taste this yummy.

PAMELA'S CRACKERS, HONEY GRAHAMS, GRAIN-FREE Available in 6.25 oz , 3 x 6.25 oz, and 6 x 6.25 oz

When you are eating grain-free, you end up having to give up a lot of your favorites and sometimes you really crave the things you once enjoyed. I know that graham crackers are not a necessity of life, but it is so enjoyable to have a grain-free option for s'mores, ice cream sandwiches, pie crusts, and snacking with nut butter and bananas. Pamela's honey graham crackers have that traditional taste and texture! They are also free of wheat, soy, corn, nut, and egg, with no artificial flavors or additives, no hydrogenated oils or trans fats, and no corn syrup. Certified gluten-free by GFCO and made in a dedicated GF facility.

Their grass-fed cattle are raised with no hormones, GMOs, antibiotics, grain byproducts, and no confinement. Thousand Hills began in 2003 with a mission to nourish the soil, plants, cattle, and people by holistically grazing cattle for their lifetime. They began with 120 acres from their home farm and have now expanded to over 1,000 acres! They source cattle from an additional 50 hand-selected, like-minded US family farms. You can feel good knowing that the beef you are eating is from cattle raised with regenerative agriculture practices.

Meats

THOUSAND HILLS GROUND BEEF, UNSEASONED PATTIES, FROZEN, GRASS-FED

Available in 32 oz (6 patties), $4 \times 32$ oz, and $8 \times 32$ oz

Sometimes little things make life so much easier – like having pre-formed patties just ready to go from your freezer to the grill in seconds! Thousand Hills grass-fed ground beef is packaged in 1-pound stack packs of three patties (each ½ pound), so all they need is a hot grill or pan and you are ready to go. Packed with flavor and protein, these juicy 85/15% lean ground beef patties make burger nights and outdoor parties nearly effortless.

THOUSAND HILLS BEEF 'N CHEDDAR SAUSAGE, UNCURED, HICKORY SMOKED, FROZEN, GRASS-FED Available in 10 oz. 4 x 10 oz. and 8 x 10 oz

Smile and say CHEESE!!! Thousand Hills hickory smoked sausage is paired perfectly with cheddar for a winning combination that gives everyone something to smile about! We love keeping these savory sausages in the freezer for a quick and easy dinner or for outdoor grilling get-togethers with friends and family. It is simple to see why this is Thousand Hills' #1 selling sausage! Made with 100% grass-fed beef stuffed with cheddar cheese. As you would expect from Thousand Hills, these contain no preservatives, nitrates, nitrites, soy, or MSG.

A Family Tree Rooted in Organics.

For generations, our family has shared a deep-rooted passion for clean, healthy living. We believe that organically grown foods are essential to nurture a long and satisfying life. We'd like to see more farmers and home gardeners turn to organic growing practices for the generational health of our families and longterm sustainability of our environment. We are committed to supporting the organic farmer and providing a wide variety of organic products for families and individuals across our country. We'll continue for generations to come. It's who we are and what we do.

We are a multi-generational,

independent family business committed to organic farming

since 1973.

ORGANIC APPLE CIDER VINEGAR FOR HEALTHY SKIN

THREE WAYS TO CARE FOR YOUR SKIN

1. For a Gentle Face Wash

2. For Antibacterial Skin Toner Mix 1 part apple cider vinegar with 2 parts purified water

3. For a Blemish Treatment Use undiluted apple cider vinegar

Azure Market Organics

Apple Cider Vinegar (CO130) is made from table grade, certified organic apples of exceptional quality. It's prepared the "old fashioned" way, without chemicals, additives, preservatives or water—unpasteurized and unfiltered in order to preserve nutrients. Its natural sediment is the true sign of raw, unfiltered vinegar and contains pectin, trace minerals (including potassium), beneficial bacteria and enzymes.

FRESH PRODUCE Review

Three Cheers for Cherries!

I have been waiting all year long to make this particular produce announcement: It is finally CHERRY SEASON! I am crazy for cherries, my all-time favorite fruit. Not only is each one a miniexplosion of incredible naturally sweet-tart taste, but cherries are packed with health benefits so I can eat them with reckless abandon and feel absolutely like every delicious bite is an investment in my health.

Whether categorized as tart or sweet, all cherries are packed with vitamins and minerals including potassium, magnesium, copper, calcium, manganese, vitamin C, and dietary fiber. They contain high levels of anthocyanins, which are a type of pigment in some plants that is thought to protect against chronic inflammatory diseases such as heart disease, hypertension, diabetes, obesity, and Alzheimer's. Anthocyanins also help regulate metabolic processes in our bodies and have anti-aging properties. Eating cherries has been clinically shown to lessen arthritic joint pain by lowering the concentration of uric acid in your blood and joints.

Want to sleep better? Amazing cherries are one of very few food sources for melatonins that control the sleep cycle. One study found that tart cherry juice consumption increased sleep by almost 1.5 hours per night! Cherries even speed muscle recovery and improve endurance for athletes and fitness enthusiasts.

All these benefits come in a delicious, fruity package that is low on the glycemic index, meaning the sugar they contain is released slowly, making us feel full longer without a sugar spike.

Cherries have a short season from June until late August, so eat up now while you can. Once you have had your fill of fresh cherries, it's a great idea to freeze some – most of their nutritional benefits are preserved when frozen. You can also dehydrate them for a snack, toss handfuls into salads and veggies, add them to breads and muffins, sprinkle over yogurt, blend into smoothies, or add them to a cheese board for a winning combination.

These sweet fruits are often dark red in color but can range from yellow to black and every shade between. Have fun trying out different varieties and appreciating the subtle flavor differences! Add some cherries to your order this month and reap the benefits!

Fruits & Vegetables Organically Grown from Seed to Harvest.

Why Pick Azure Organics?

It all begins with healthy soil.

Our organic fruits and vegetables are grown on land that has been sustainably tended. Nurtured in soil that is rich in nutrients and minerals. This ensures our produce and grains are free of pesticides, herbicides, and other harmful substances, and full of life-giving benefits. Many of our products go far beyond the minimum organic standards to provide your family with exceptional, clean, and nutrient-dense food. We believe it is our responsibility to bring you foods that nourish the body and support health. At Azure, we grow with good health and good taste in mind... organically.
